It will be seen from these tables that there has been a diminution of 863.402 uen in the total trade for the first six months of the year se compared with 1883. It will further be seen that the decrease is confined to Imports, there being a slight increase on the Export side. The differences, however, are so trifling that the trade may be said to have remained stationary. a result not particularly satisfactory, but nevertheless the upper levels. Most of these men carry their more favourable than some persons were disposed to expect who prophesied that the great increase during last year, as compared with 1887, would prove for the most part fictitious. It is a noteworthy fact that the import of specie during the six months (6.269,041 yer) exceeded the export (1,538,168 yen) by 4,730,872 yen; a circumstance doubtless attributable to the transfer of Government funds from London to Tokyo. - Japan Mail.

No doubt you are desirons of knowing what a painter of the West will say of the painters of Japan; to hear how the art of your great and interesting country has appealed to me; and to an opinion from me as to the position it holds in the Western world and as to the possibilities of its future development. These things you expect of me. I am sure if one of your artists could be induced to visit us and tell us of his first impressions of our art, we would be extremely interested. I have been thinking with what emotions he would approach the great pictures of Europe.
